

Today We Had Some Weather

Today we had some weather
like I've never seen before, so I pulled on my galoshes and I headed out the door.

It sprinkled, first so lightly,
it could easily be mist.
A tornado then came dancing by,
it swung and did the twist.

The fogbanks opened up their vaults and let out all their fogs, and the dog pound took a pounding;
it was raining cats and dogs.

It started raining buckets, then the rain came down in sheets.
I had never seen so many sheets and buckets in the streets.

I'd planned to watch the weather and, though gallantly I tried, when it started hailing taxis
I gave up and went inside.

— Kenn Nesbitt

